Linda Alcoff, among others, has reminded us that there are serious problems involved in speaking for others⁴⁹ and I will explore those problems later as they relate to my own location and politics within African feminist discourse. Some books are fast paced adrenaline rides where you hold on for dear life, others are more like a slow walk through the park, where you take in more of what's around you and can examine your surroundings. I think the problem with trying to rate this book is that I've no idea what sort of book this is.
